HANOVER, May 23.

THE minister of this electorate at Ratisbon, has sent to the ministers an account of what has passed in relation to the affair of East-Friesland, with the protest of the minister from Brandenburgh; whereupon orders have been dispatched to that minister, how to further conduct himself in the pursuit of that important affair.

Berlin, May 19. For some weeks past, there have arrived in this capital, many French protestants, who have withdrawn themselves from Nisme, and other places in Languedoc.

Stockholm, May 15. A project is revived here for making Marstrand a free port, and the general mart of the fishery, on account of its fine situation and strength, both by art and nature, being covered on all sides, defended by a fine citadel, and having a double entrance; besides that the largest men of war, and several hundred merchantmen, may ride safely at anchor in the harbour. The revival of the fishery is one of the articles which the government seems to have most at heart. It is well known that in the year 1659. king Charles Gustavus, made a treaty of alliance with Oliver Cromwell, by which an advantageous article was stipulated for the Swedes, relating to the liberty of fishing on the British coasts, either for herrings, or any other fish, provided the number of their fishing vessels did not exceed 1000; And as the good understanding with Great Britain, has never since suffered any material or sensible alteration, that treaty is deemed to be still in force.

London, May 5. On occasion of the disturbances in the Upper-Austria about religion, it may be observed, that differences in religion would never be productive of tumults or insurrections in any country, if the sovereign or his ministers were not in some measure the occasion of such disorders: They must have behaved partially, too much favoured one side, or too much depressed the other. Dissenters from the established religion of any state cannot reasonably expect to be favoured in all respects equally with conformists; but they have a right to liberty of conscience, and the privilege of serving God in that way which they think most acceptable to him, as it will be no excuse at the great day, if men go astray, to say that they acted according to the principles and practice in fashion at court. As for the protestants in the Upper-Austria, it appears by the accounts we have hitherto received from Vienna and Ratisbon, they ask nothing more than the free exercise of their religion, or else leave to depart with their effects: and 'tis with great pleasure we find, that the king of Prussia intends to interpose, in order to obtain that reasonable indulgence for them: But it will be much more pleasing to hear (which we hope will happen in a post or two) that the British minister at Vienna is also become an advocate for the said protestants, as the intercession of a friend must needs have more weight than that of a party suspected of being an enemy, and the rather, as it is in the power of this court to obtain any reasonable request of the house of Austria, since that family stands in much greater need of England, than England does of it.

London, May 16. All the time that his Britannick majesty was expected to arrive in Holland, a courier waited at Maesslandsluys for the signal of the squadron, which convoyed him, being in view; which he no sooner perceived, by the lowering of the flag upon the tower of the Briel, than he posted to the Hague. The king, according to all appearance, was desirous of giving Madam the Governante an opportunity of coming to see him; and to that end it is believed he went to [illegible] inn, instead of stopping at the state-house, called Genwulkudsluys, at Helvoet, and passing the night there, as his majesty used to do. He arrived at Maesslandsluys at 6 a clock, and supped and lay in that inn, which he had not done for many years before. If his majesty had only passed through that village, he might have been, soon after 10 a clock, at the house of his agent at Utrecht, where supper was prepared for him, and the gates kept open all night. All this proves the design which the king had to have an interview with her royal highness the Governante his daughter, who did not come as she was expected to have done; and people are very desirous to know the reason of it. There are indeed some letters from the Hague, which say that it was owing to the influence of a certain person, who has more particularly, than any other, the ear of her royal highness, to the great concern of her faithful counsellors, and of all good patriots. This man it is believed, was afraid that, upon his majesty's being informed how hurtful his council was to publick affairs, he should fall a victim to such interview. It has therefore, it is said, been resolved, that her royal highness shall be at Loo with her family, at the return of the king, who did not stay at all at Utrecht, where there were more people than ordinary to see him.

London, May 23. Letters from Vienna observe, that orders have been sent from the war office to the commanders of the imperial regiments to keep all soldiers that are yet fit for service, and not to discharge them so frequently as they used to do, under the pretext of their being superannuated; and as the imperial recruting officers are still very busy in Franconia, the electorate of Cologne, and other parts of the empire, they conclude that the peace of Germany is not so well settled, but that there is still reason enough to make provision for war.

London, May 26. Letters from Brussels say, that the garrisons of Namur, Tournay, and Ypres, will be reinforced speedily by Dutch troops. And we have letters from Toulon which assure, that the four men of war which are to be sent out on a secret expedition, fell down into the road of that harbour on the 9th instant. Likewise from Copenhagen, that orders are given for compleating all the regiments of that kingdom, both horse and foot.

London, June 27. This morning, about one o'clock, a most terible fire broke out at No. 10, in Lincoln's Inn New Square, which entirely consumed the whole set of chambers, and likewise the whole of No. 11. The gentlemen inhabiting No. 10, among whom were Mr. Wilbraham, Mr. York, Mr. Harley, and several others of great eminence in their profession, had not time to save the least thing. Those in No. 11, it is thought, have pretty well secured theirs.

June 30. The fire that broke out on saturday morning in Lincoln's Inn New Square, intirely consumed No. 10, and all but the two uppermost stories of No. 11. being in the whole 16 sets of chambers. The rage of the flames defeated the assistance of what little water could be got, which was extremely scarce. The gentlemen who lost their chambers in this dreadful scene, are R. Wilbraham, Esq; the Hon. Edw. Harley, Esq; the Hon. Cha. Yorke, Esq; E Hoskyns, Esq; Cholmley, Esq; Edmund Sawier, Esq; master in chancery, Powell, Esq; and -- Ansell, Esq; all in No. 10. Mr. Yorke, and Mr. Hoskyns, who lay up one pair of stairs, were both asleep, and escaped in their breeches and shirts only, at the most imminent hazard of their lives. All the papers, books, plate, furniture, and wearing apparel of the above gentlemen were destroyed, and not an article saved. The gentlemen in the next stair-case (No. 11.) viz. John Sharpe, Esq; sollicitor to the treasury, Edward Booth, Esq; Mr. Ambler, Mr. Fazakerly, Mr. Fellors, and Mr. Wilmot, had just time to save things of most consequence from the flames. There are various reports of its beginning, which was generally believed to be either in Mr. Powell's chambers, under those of R. Wilbraham, Esq; or in Mr. Wilbraham's. The many private persons whose material properties were lodged in the hands of the above gentlemen of eminence, render it impossible to make any computation of the irreparable losses and difficulties that many families must necessarily be involved in. The stamp-office was in great danger, and had not the wind been favourable for it, the party wall could hardly have saved it. All the goods in the stocking and stick-shops under the gateway were destroyed, and several of the little shops in Scarlet-street were much damaged. It is remarkable that when the fire fire was firſt diſcovered, the greateſt part of the watchmen were drunk and aſleep

Mr. Wilbraham had lately purchaſed an eſtate of great value, the title deeds to which, beſides numberleſs other deeds, mortgages, &c. were burnt.

Mr. Pickering, clerk to Mr. Wilbraham, has loſt upwards of eleven hundred pounds in money and bank notes of his own and other perſons, and ſecurities for thirty thouſand pounds more; & alſo all the title deeds to lord Leigh's eſtate.

London, July 2 The right hon. the lord chancellor has ſuſpended all proceedings in chancery, on account of the unhappy fire on ſaturday laſt in lincoln's inn ſquare.

Their noble mightineſſes the ſtates of Holland have ordered an account to be laid before them of ſuch branches of commerce as are in any degree in decay, with the cauſes, in order to their being immediately redreſſed.

London, July 7. The parliament, which ſtands prorogued to the 16th day of this month, by order of council is further prorogued to the 28th of September.

The truſtees for eſtabliſhing the colony of Georgia having ſurrendered their charter to his majeſty, the lords juſtices have iſſued a proclamation for continuing all perſons in their reſpective offices in the ſaid colony, until his majeſty's pleaſure be farther known, or other proviſions be made for the due government and ordering of his majeſty's ſaid colony.

We hear that the private letters dated the 26th of November, that came with the expreſs over land to the Eaſt India company, bring advice that the diſturbances at Surat and Tillicherry, two ſettlements on the Malabar coaſt belonging to the Engliſh, are likely to continue, and that the natives have declared a Nabob in the French intereſt.

Chamberry, June 28. In conformity to the king's orders, ſeveral Proteſtant families, who lately reſided at St Victor and Chapitre, have retired from thence, ſome into Switzerland, and others into the territories of the republic of Geneva.

London, July 9. Private letters by the laſt French mail bring advice, that the ſquadron which ſailed from Breſt the 9th of July laſt year, and touched at Mofambic, in order to make a ſettlement on that coaſt, has ſince ſteer'd eaſtward, and is arrived at the Iſle of Bourbon.

Letters from Madrid mention a treaty of commerce between his Catholic majeſty and the emperor, in quality of grand duke of Tuſcany; but as to Mr. Keene's negotiation it remains ſtill upon the carpet.

Extract of a private Letter from Niſmes in Languedoc, dated June 26th.

"The perſecution againſt the Proteſtants in this country, goes on with more rigor than ever; for lately a young gentleman, Mr. Benetar, was condemned at Montpellier to be hanged for frequenting religious aſſemblies. He received his ſentence in the morning, and was executed in the evening: When he heard that death was pronounced againſt him, he ſhed a few tears; but ſoon recovered himſelf, and ſaid to the judge, God forgive this weakneſs of human nature. Two jeſuits went to viſit him in priſon; but he deſired them not to trouble him in the laſt moments of his life. And as he was going to the Gallows, M. Flechier, a proteſtant clergyman, now under ſentence of death, hearing ſome noiſe in the ſtreet, crept to the window, and exhorted him in the perſeverance of his religion, and that he would be ſoon crowned with glory."

London, July 11. The laſt advice from Paris bring a confirmation that there is a deſign to puſh for the aſſembling of a national council of biſhops and divines, in order to decide, whether the church of chriſt might not ſubſiſt well enough without the conſtitution of UNIGENITUS. And they think that no juncture can be more favourable than the preſent for aſſembling ſuch a council, as the reigning pope is a man of more learning and better qualities than moſt of his predeceſſors, quite averſe to diſputes about trifles, and ever ready to make all reaſonable conceſſions for the ſake of peace.

NEWPORT, Rhode-Iſland, July 24. On wedneſday laſt arrived here Capt. Wilcox from Jamaica, in whom came paſſengers, Captains Mawdſley and Cozens, both of this place; the former of which loaded in the bay of Honduras, and after being out 15 days, met with a xebeck of 14 ſix-pounders, and a caſhew-piece, with nigh 100 men; they engaged for a conſiderable time very warmly, and Captain Mawdſley having almoſt expended all his ammunition, made preparation for boarding, and bore down upon her; upon which the xebeck made off, and that evening went to the Muſcito ſhore, at a place called Black River: About 10 the ſame evening, the zebek joined with a galley came into the road, and cut his veſſel out, with the aforeſaid Cozen's ſloop and carried them both off, the Captains being on ſhore. Capt. Mawdſley had 40 men, many of which were negroes and but a few ſmall carriage guns; he heard afterwards that he had killed and wounded ſeveral of the Spaniards.—The xebeck was commanded by one Don Juan, a man famous in the late war for a commander of a privateer.

New-York, July 27. By a veſſel from Jamaica, we have advice, that they are in ſome pain there for Coracoa, as the veſſels expected from thence for ſome months paſt, were not arrived, and a report prevailed that five Spaniſh men of war with other veſſels, and a conſiderable number of forces were preparing to attack it from the Spaniſh Main.—The ſame report is brought alſo by ſome veſſels from other parts of the Weſt Indies. And as we have had no veſſels lately from Curacoa, it is apprehended, that an embargo, at leaſt, is laid on all veſſels at that iſland.

Philadelphia, July 31. Our late advices from Lewiſburg (alias Placentia Nova) ſay, that at Canada it was very ſickly amongſt the inhabitants there, and a great mortality among the cattle:—That the Governor is obliged to have his neck double guarded, and dare not come out of it for fear of the people, who are ſo incenſed againſt him on the account of the ill uſage to 'em, that they threaten to ſend him back to France in irons if they catch him.

New-York, Auguſt 3. By Capt. Furlow, in forty days from the bay of Honduras, we have advice, that the Spaniards have made a ſettlement very near that place, from whence they lately ſent ten armed craft to the bay, and driven off all the negroes belonging to the Engliſh, which had obliged moſt of the heads of the bay, to depart either to the Muſcito ſhore, or Jamaica. Capt. Furlow left but three Engliſh veſſels in the bay, viz ——the Captains Mann, Jones and Bowen, which were all of this port. Capt. Schoat, who arrived here yeſterday, and Capt. M'Namara, bound for Hamburgh, ſailed in company with him from the bay.

In Capt. Griffith from Holland, but laſt from Newcaſtle on Tyne, there is come over ſeven German clergymen, deſigned for the back ſettlements of this province and Pennſylvania. As alſo a number of glaſs men, to work in a glaſs manufactory now erecting on the north river, in the county of [illegible] in this province.

By the Boſton papers it appears, that 5059 white perſons and 415 blacks, have had the ſmall-pox in that town this ſeaſon, in the natural way, of whom have died 452 whites and 62 blacks; and that 1970 whites, and 139 blacks have been inoculated, of whom 23 whites, and 7 blacks have died; that only 23 perſons are now ſick with it, and but 174 more are ſtill liable to it: The ſtreets and houſes are cleaning and airing; and no more people will be ſuffered to be inoculated there at this time.

Philadelphia, Auguſt 6. Laſt friday, early in the morning, the lightning ſtruck two houſes on ſociety hill, and did them conſiderable damage, but hurt no perſon. It was very remarkable in both houſes, that the lightning in its paſſage from the roof to the ground, ſeem'd to go conſiderably out of a direct courſe, for the ſake of paſſing thro' metal; ſuch as hinges, braſh weights, iron rods, the pendulum of a clock, &c. and that where it had ſufficient metal to conduct it no harm was damaged; but where it paſſed thro' plaiſtering or wood work, it rent and ſplit them ſurprizingly.

New-York, Auguſt 23. By a gentleman from Lon[illegible] but laſt from Maderia, we are informed, that Commodore Pye, in his majeſty' ſhip Advice, of 50 guns, with Geo. Matthews on board, and another of 20, put into that Iſland in their way from England for Antigua, but ſailed again the latter end of June laſt. Alſo, that his majeſty's ſhip [illegible] Capt. Young, of 40 guns, with Col. Hopſon on board, is to ſucceed Governor Cornwallis (now called home) in the government of Nova-Scotia, put into that Iſland alſo, and ſailed from thence about the ſame time Commodore Pye. He likewiſe informs us, that the Torrington man of war, of 20 guns, now at Nova Scotia, was ordered for this place, and that the Jaſon, after her arrival at Halifax, was to ſucceed to her ſtation at Boſton, in the room of his majeſty's Succeſs, lord Colvil, ordered home.

CHARLES-TOWN, October [illegible]

On Saturday laſt we had here a [illegible] another terrible Hurricane, which began, with Wind [illegible] and Rain, at 2 o'Clock in the Afternoon, but ceaſed ſoon after the Evening. For 2 or 3 Days before, the Wind (which blew [illegible] and E.

ttled at S.E.), and the great Quantity of Rain that had fallen, kept the Tides from ebbing their due Space and Time, ſo that when this Hurricane began to abate, tho' the Water ſhould have been low, it was higher than at common Spring-Tides; and had the Wind roſe, as was expected, when the Flood ſhou'd have come in, our Situation would have been moſt deplorable indeed! But the ſame Providence that interpoſed before, was again viſible here. In this Town, it did little other Damage, than to the Goods of thoſe People who removed from the moſt expoſed Places, and the Tops of ſome Houſes: But at Winyaw, we are inform'd, it was more ſeverely felt than the former. About Midnight the Wind veered round to N.W. when another violent Storm broke up the bad Weather.—— We have daily ſuch a Number of melancholly Accounts from all Parts of the Country, of the Damage and Loſſes ſuſtained on the 15th and 30th ult. that they would afford endleſs Matter for this Paper, were we to publiſh them.

The Ship Africa, Capt. Herrington, was alſo ſtranded, at a Place called Meitchamp's Iſland; and Capt. Tucker's Schooner of this Port, that went to take out the Africa's Cargo, drove aſhore.
